To Fully Enjoy Our Cigarettes, You're Going To Need A Cigar Box.

With two on every pack, and 28 in every carton, Raleigh and Belair coupons add up really fast. So fast, in fact, that people are always looking for good places to save them.

Many tell us that an empty cigar box works best. Others prefer one of those big, pickle jars. Some even stick them in piggy banks, which may be the most appropriate place of all.

Especially since Raleigh and Belair coupons are as good as cash for more than 700 great gifts from our catalog.

For your free copy, just call us toll-free from anywhere in the Continental U.S., 1-800-626-5510. (You must be 21 or older. Please allow four to six weeks for shipment.)

Meanwhile, try a pack of rich, flavorful Raleigh. Or cool, menthol Belair. One taste, and it won't be very long before you're looking around for big, pickle jars and empty cigar boxes.

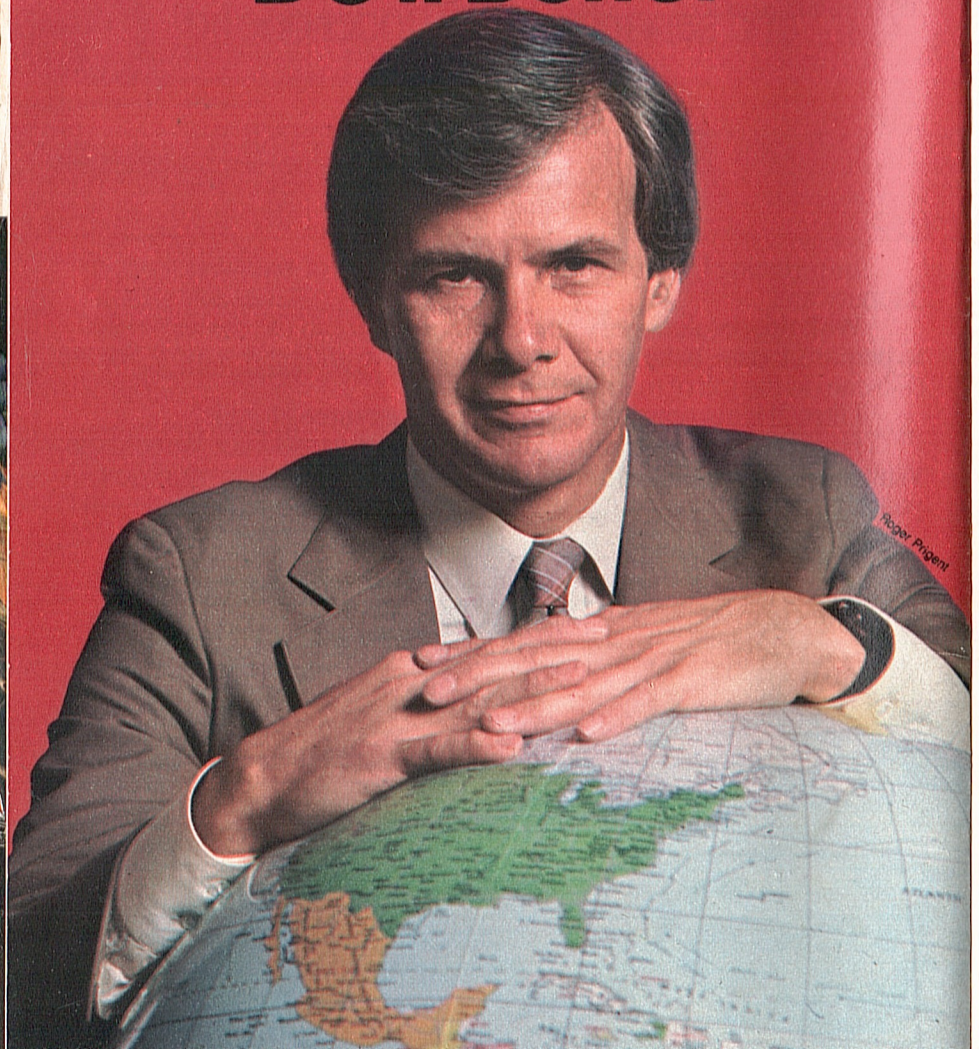
Network News—How We Can Do It Better



NBC's anchorman suggests ways the networks could exploit TV's strengths more effectively

By Tom Brokaw

COMMENTARY

When TV GUIDE asked for my thoughts on how network news might be improved, my immediate reaction was, "No way. We have enough critics." However, as one who spends a good deal of his professional life chronicling the imperfections and inadequacies of others, I do appreciate the potential benefits of self-criticism.

First, a caveat: as good as it is, network news will never be an adequate replacement for a first-rate daily newspaper, a weekly newsmagazine or a periodical specializing in a specific subject. Instead, think of network news as a part of the information spectrum. To be sure, we are a conspicuous and boisterous presence in that spectrum, sort of like a tap dancer in the corps de ballet. Anyone who wishes to be adequately informed in this complicated world must make use of many elements in the spectrum, using the information from one part to complement the information from another part. Now, what will enhance our performance?

To begin, we need a wider stage. The time constraints on the evening news programs are suffocating. We're confined to 22 minutes (excluding commercials) in which to report to a mass audience of enormously varied needs and tastes subjects as complicated as nuclear-arms control, supply-side economics, international politics and the impact of high technology on medicine.

The time has come for more time. A one-hour network evening news program is an imperative if television news is to begin to fulfill its potential and its obligation to its audience.

Alas, there are those even within our ranks who believe a one-hour program is unnecessary. To them, and to others who remain skeptical, let me raise some prospects of what we could do with the additional time.

We could address what I believe is our most glaring shortcoming. We don't adequately examine the many sides of a complicated subject and offer a sufficiently broad context. With the additional time we could construct a format that would bring together the best elements of Nightly News, Today and Meet the Press. That is, a report from the site of a story summarizing what happened, why and where, followed by a prepared analysis of the likely consequences and, later in the program, interviews with the principals. Such an approach, in which one → part of the format reinforces the other, improves the prospects that what we broadcast will be memorable and not simply a series of fleeting images.

Of course, form alone is not the answer. Skilled journalists who understand these complicated subjects, whether they are covering the Middle East or the American Midwest, are the key. In fact, the opportunities of an hour format should be an irresistible attraction to those who have stayed away from broadcast journalism because of the built-in limits.

As it is, we already have in place a worldwide corps of crack reporters and producers who, because of the time constraints, too seldom have an opportunity to report in detail the subjects they know best. Coverage of subjects that receive scant attention on the local news programs, such as foreign affairs, national politics, international economics, science and medicine, national trends in a variety of matters, is our role in the electronic spectrum.

By the time we get on the air, the information cycle has been turned over countless times on local television, cable television and all-news radio. Our challenge, then, is to provide depth and breadth to the bits of information that bombard our viewers all day, whether it's a tragic gas leak in Bhopal, India, or a coup in Central America. We could do that best if we had additional time.

However, even in the present format there are steps we can take. For example, network journalists too seldom employ the unique qualities of television simply to transmit experience. That was a phrase of former NBC News president Reuven Frank's when he was producing The Huntley-Brinkley Report. His argument, which remains valid today, is that television, skillfully used, can do what no newspaper or magazine can ever achieve. It can convey the light and sound and unfiltered emotion of war, the birth of a child, the pain of a famine, the joy of a winning run. It can be a window on the human experience, and that, too, is a function of journalism.

Simultaneously, television news must also be bold enough to report a story when there are no pictures. Our new graphics technology makes that possible. We can now describe abstract ideas, such as economic theory, or events at which cameras were not present, such as secret meetings, with electronic graphics that reinforce the verbal descriptions. Although technology alone is not the answer, its presence does make it more likely we'll cover an important subject that in the past may have been dismissed as "not good television."

We also should learn to take more chances with our coverage (we really are a play-it-safe medium). For example, on a night when a major story of obvious significance breaks, we should be prepared to devote most, if not all, of the program to that story and its ramifications. That kind of coverage would include live interviews as well as prepared reports.

And while we cannot let our sophisticated technology make our choices for us, we should make a greater effort to take advantage of the built-in excitement of live coverage. Our colleagues on the morning programs are light years ahead of us in that regard.

In fact, no one I know in network news is satisfied with the status quo. We're all constantly attempting to improve what we do. I think it shows, whether we're reporting the many dimensions of the arms-control talks live from Geneva or describing in detail the complications of an artificial-heart operation from Louisville or documenting the corruption of a foreign government involved in the drug trade.

As a result of the work and vision of the dedicated professionals at all three networks, I am persuaded that the evening news programs will continue to improve along the lines I've suggested here. And given the extra half hour of air time, we might even be able to win over our most severe critics. (END)

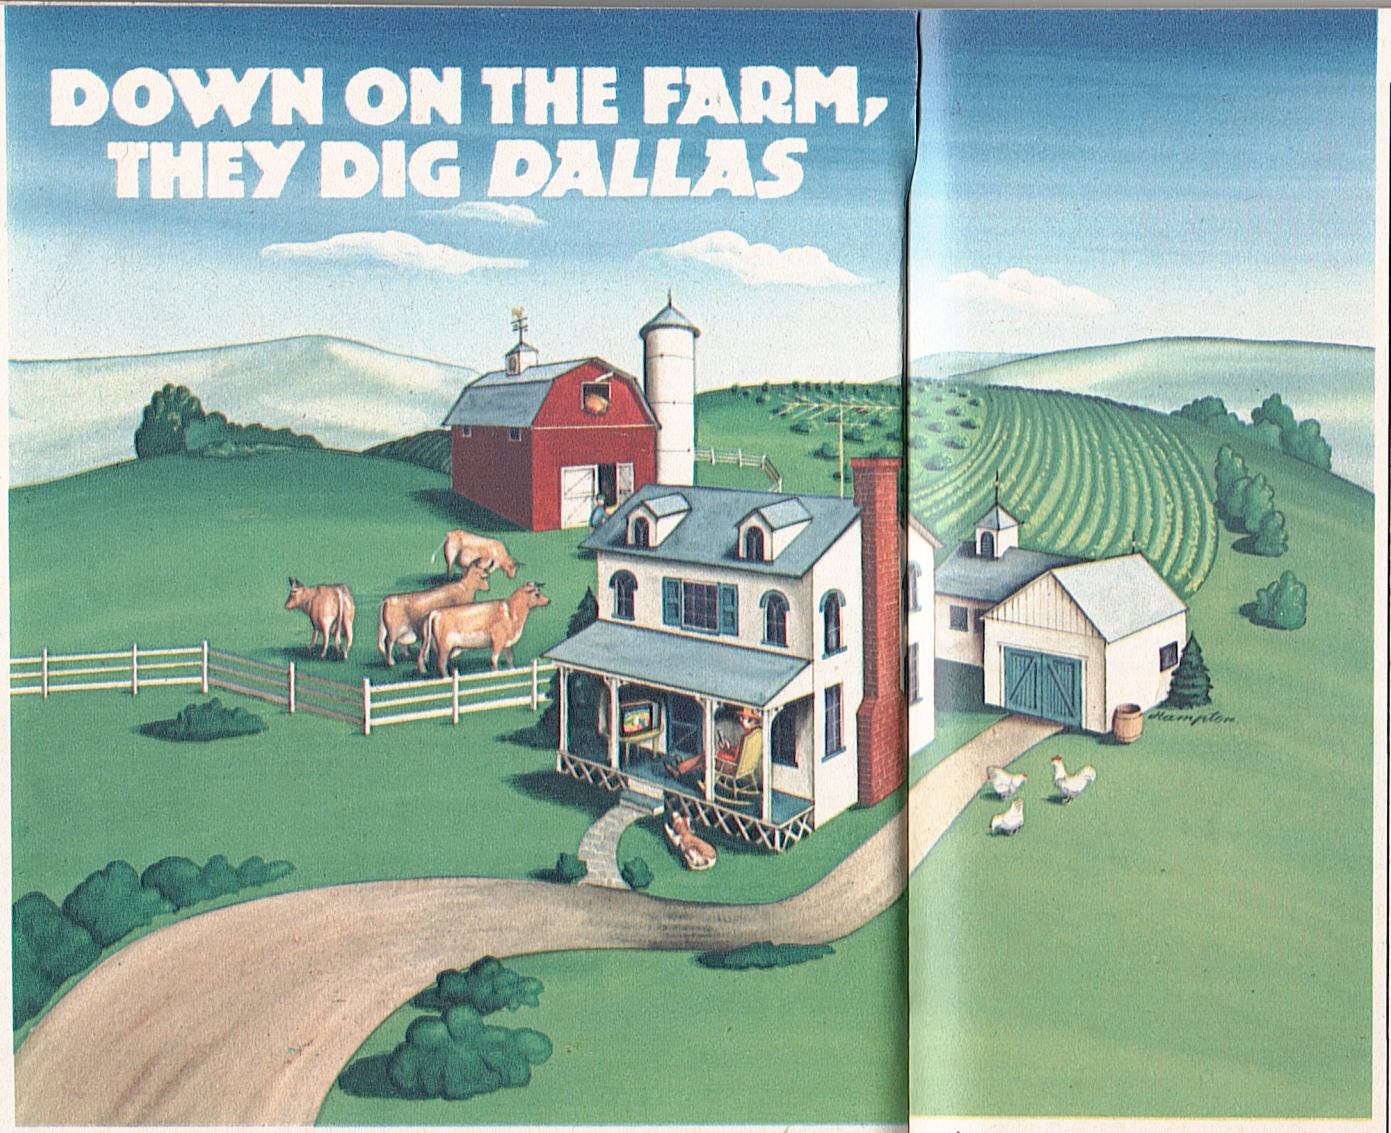
DOWN ON THE FARM, THEY DIG DALLAS



Blake Hampton

When the folks in this rural Vermont community take time out for TV, they prefer the glitz of J.R.'s world to the quaint country tales they know so well

By Noel Perrin

There's a farmer I know who likes to sit in front of the big window in his kitchen. Looking out, he can see a 30-acre field dotted with cows, and beyond that the wooded hills. Some mornings the field is mist-covered, like a Japanese landscape; sometimes it's dappled with meadow flowers; sometimes two or three deer will be on the edge by the woods, standing up on their hind legs to bite apples off the old apple trees along the fence. (The cows, who have first claim but poor balance, get the lower apples—all that can be reached with four feet on the ground.)

"That window is my TV set," the farmer likes to say. "Only gets one channel. But I sure do enjoy the show."

Most farmers, however, possess a more conventional TV set. What do they watch . . . and enjoy? Is it any different from what other people look at? Yes and no.

To begin with a no, farmers spend very little of their time watching farm shows. They couldn't, even if they wanted to. In most parts of the country there are hardly any to watch. Take my own state of Vermont. It's officially classified as the most rural state in the country. How many farm shows are there? Two.

One's a morning show called Farm Day; it runs weekdays from 7:30 to 7:45. No farmer I know watches it. That's partly because they're out doing chores, but mostly because this nationally intended show is not really about farming. It centers on commodity prices.

The other is a local show produced in Burlington, Vt. This one is called Across the Fence, and it's in prime time—prime time for farmers, that is. This interesting part of the day comes in two sections. Because farmers get up so early and therefore go to bed so early, anything after 10 P.M. is usually wasted on them, and they have been known to go sound asleep during a commercial at 8:42. But all farmers eat lunch, known in the country as dinner. (What city people call dinner is supper in the country.) And unlike most people they eat it at home, where they can easily watch TV. Prime time on the farm is noon to 1 P.M., plus early evening.

Across the Fence runs from 12:10 to 12:30 P.M., and catches the lunch crowd. A fair number of my neighbors actually watch it, especially the first minute or so, which is community announcements, such as who is having a maple-sugar-on-snow party where. The rest of the show is whatever the University of Vermont Extension Service wants to make it. It might be farm news, or advice on how to start plants—or it might range as far from agriculture as a program on understanding dreams.

What about real shows, such as other people watch? What about Dynasty and People's Court and game shows and sports and specials and movies? Well, →

Noel Perrin is a professor of English at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H. His farm in Vermont is across the state line and down the road a piece.

farmers watch most of these, too, but with three big differences from the general public. One is that farm families tend to dislike violence. For example, Murder, She Wrote is the only popular detective show around here, and as one dairyman's wife I know says happily about it, "They don't show 'em doing things."

Another difference is that country people—at least on farms in northern New England—are quite moderate viewers altogether. The average adult on a farm around here watches no more than six to 10 shows a week. That's partly from lack of time. Cows have to be milked seven days a week, and chores don't go away just because it's a national holiday. Few farmers sit around wondering how to fill the idle hours.

It's also a lack of choice. Cable does not often make its way across cow pastures. Around here, unless you happen to live on a hilltop, you get three channels, maybe four. I live partway up a hill, but have a high antenna. I get four.

The result is that we tend to be quite picky viewers. If we have to pinch ourselves to stay awake, we're not going to stay awake, we're not going to just watch any old rerun, or some tired movie that was B-minus when new. We're going to save ourselves for the best specials, and for a handful of outstanding shows. What about taping good shows and seeing them later, like maybe the next day during lunch? That may happen yet. It doesn't now. It can't. I'm only aware of four VCR's in the whole town.

There are exceptions to the only-the-best rule, of course. One smart and very hard-working farmer I know devotes an hour every afternoon to soap opera. Even in planting time, he is glued to the screen from 1 to 2 P.M., watching All My Children. "My family thinks it's a joke," he says, "but you know, sometimes they watch with me."

The third difference is that farmers almost never look at quaint shows about rural folks—Little House on the Prairie or any other. We know all about that. What we don't know about is the urban life of the very rich, and if a farmer watches one drama every week it's going to be Dallas (the clear favorite around here) or Dynasty or Knots Landing. We're mainstream there.

Well, maybe there's a fourth difference, too. Farm families are probably a little more prudish than the American average. You might think we wouldn't be, exposed as we are to the intimate lives of roosters and hens, bulls and cows, etc., but we are. We don't want to see people doing things on the screen.

Take a conversation I had in the village store a few months ago. I'd run into a man I'll call Eben, an old retired farmer. Eben is probably the most profane person I have ever known—in 20 years, I have never heard him say a sentence more than 10 words long without including at least one swear word. (I'm going to tone him down a little here.)

When I saw him, he had just installed a dish antenna, the first in our part of town. Eben has done lots of things first. So he, unlike everybody else, was getting dozens of channels. I asked him how he liked it.

"B'god, they told me I'd get a lot of new stuff," he said. "But I didn't know how much. Did you know there's one channel where there ain't nothin' but [lovin']?"

"Is that your favorite channel now, Eben?"

"Huh! I tried it. One night I thought I'll see how long they can keep it up. So I stayed up all night, and b'god they was still at it at seven in the morning. B'god, that ain't right."

"You did stay up," I pointed out.

"Well, b'god, I ain't goin' to again. Ain't nothing on none of them channels worth staying up past 10 o'clock for, and least of all them sex maniacs."

The rest of us yokels might put it more temperately. But I think Eben spoke for the whole countryside. END

Director to Star:

'Carmen, You Are About as Sexy as a Fish'

At 17, Carmen Thomas is still learning how to deal with the give-and-take of soap acting

By Berry Stainback

J. A. Giordano

Carmen Thomas, who plays Hillary on ABC's All My Children, walked onto the set to block out a scene. Henry Kaplan, the director of this episode, watched through the camera's large viewer. Then he called for quiet and told Thomas to begin. She recited her lines, took her steps, and looked down to check her mark on the floor. When she did so her face ducked off camera, and Kaplan said loudly, "Carmen, see that little black thing on the camera? That's what we call a lens."

Thomas went through her moves again without flaw. When she finished, she glanced over her shoulder and noticed that the second camera was behind her, pointing down toward her back. "Henry," she asked, "when we start, the camera's not on my fanny, is it?"

"Darling, the camera will be wherever I want it," Kaplan fairly shouted.

The actors broke and Thomas was asked why she was concerned that the camera might focus on her fanny. "I didn't know if I should shake it or what," she said.

When she joined the serial (in February 1984), Thomas was not so relaxed. She was then a 16-year-old from a quiet Atlanta suburb. When she got the part, she had just seven days to withdraw from school, say her goodbyes and pack.

Thomas studied her script on the flight to New York. She and her mother arrived late Sunday night. She reported to the studio at 7:15 the next morning. One day later, she had to play a major emotional scene.

"Everything happened so fast I didn't have time to get nervous at first. Then the nervousness came," Thomas recalled. "I couldn't even watch myself for about two months. I hated the way I looked, the way I acted. Ugh! I just could not look at myself objectively."

"I taped the shows because I work and Carmen doesn't get home until after 7," said her mother, Kay Thomas. "At first Carmen didn't even want me to watch. 'Please,' she'd say, 'please don't watch.' I was surprised. Carmen never had any fear of getting up in front of an audience, even as a small child."

At 6, Thomas began performing with hand puppets. The following year her parents were divorced and Thomas moved with her mother to Atlanta. While Kay started her career with an insurance company, Thomas attended school and tried out for every show that came along. She performed in school productions, at the Children's Civic Theater, at the Harlequin Dinner Theater and in summer stock.

But it was at Atlanta's North Side School of the Arts ("A great school, kinda like Fame") that she was contacted by the Chez Agency (its co-owner is named Shay, naturally). It arranged for Thomas to try out for the role of Bear Bryant's daughter in the film "Bear." She came home yelling, "Mom, Mom, I'm gonna be in a movie! I have to go downtown at 8 o'clock tonight and audition for the director in his hotel room!"

"Whaaat?" Kay said, "You're not going to any hotel alone."

Kay went along for the audition. Thomas got the part and appeared in the film that opened last fall to the sound of few hands clapping. It was quickly withdrawn for recutting.

Thomas next tried out for Ryan's Hope and All My Children. She wasn't right for either part. But after being flown to New York for an audition, she won the role of Hillary.

"Thank goodness everyone was nice to me here," Thomas said. Support was always there, particularly from director Kaplan, whose style can be intimidating. Thomas's colleagues kept telling her, "Now look, don't worry when Henry is directing. He puts on a show, so just listen to his direction and not to his asides. If he tells you you're awful or boring, ignore him."

The first day she was to work with Kaplan, Thomas said, "I was scared. When the call came for me, I hurried up to the set. Henry was standing there saying, 'Five hours I've been waiting, Hillary, five hours!' For days he had me so upset I'd cry in my dressing room. People would tell me, 'Don't get upset, give it right back to him.' So I started doing that. I'd be on the set when Henry was late and when he came in I'd say, 'Five hours, Henry, I've been waiting five hours for you'." She laughed. "But I found that any time he knows he's done something to upset you, Henry is really like a pussycat."

That was something she had to learn, just as she had to learn, at age 16, how to relax playing a love scene. Before the first one, with Michael Knight, who plays Tad, Thomas was so nervous she brushed her teeth 10 times. "Then I went on the set and Michael gave me a long, lingering kiss—and he'd had onions for lunch! We laughed about it. Michael says when I eat sushi for lunch I smell like a trout." Now they go out together for Mexican food and no one complains.

Carmen has overcome all of her fears except one. "I'd be scared to death to play a steamy bed scene," she said. She still hasn't played one, even though Hillary is now married to Bob Georgia. She came close with Michael Knight's character. Tad has had several fantasies of Hillary coming to his bed in a robe, and Thomas had to act out the scenes. "I'm always nervous," she said, "because I have to walk in looking sexy. Henry Kaplan directed one of these fantasies and he said, 'Carmen, you are about as sexy as a fish'."

Thomas, though pleased with her success, is not sure how far she wants to take her career. Between takes not long ago, veteran actor Louis Edmonds, who plays her father, said to her, "I hope you don't stay with this too long. I've seen so many who go on and on and end up having nothing to think of but their bloody careers."

"Louis, I'm Southern," Thomas said. "I won't get out of the business altogether, but when I'm 25 or so I'm going back home and have a family." END

Rumor is she'll star in and co-produce six one-hour shows for ABC. The concept? They haven't decided yet. . . . Morgan Fairchild. The alumna of Dallas, Flamingo Road and Paper Dolls is segueing to yet another prime-time soap: CBS's Falcon Crest. Together Again

Previously on Hill Street Blues (actually, this past season), viewers saw the efforts of Sgt. Lucy Bates to adopt a streetwise ghetto kid. The chemistry between Betty Thomas (as Bates) and Zero Hubbard (as the urchin, Fabian DeWitt) so impressed Anson Williams (formerly Potsie Webber on Happy Days) that he persuaded both actors to co-star in an ABC Afterschool Special this fall for which Williams is co-writer and director. In "No Greater Love," Thomas takes the role of a doctor and Hubbard is her patient—a youngster whose life depends upon finding a kidney donor.

New this fall on CBS is Stir Crazy, a series based on the 1980 Gene Wilder-Richard Pryor film comedy. Newcomer Joseph Guzaldo (above) has the Wilder role. Does he have Wilder in mind, too? "Even Laurence Olivier steals," says Guzaldo with a shrug, admitting that he has studied Wilder. "But I wouldn't try to imitate him. I try to make what I see on the page my own. I think that's what really won me the part," he concludes. "Because I didn't try to do a Gene Wilder."

The People's Choice

Each year, producers whose shows receive Emmy nominations in the Best Series categories submit what they consider to be their best episode. Executive producer Barney Rosenzweig, whose Cagney & Lacey, on CBS, is vying for Outstanding Drama Series, decided the public should help him choose. Last month, he held screenings of 12 C & L episodes at a Santa Monica, Cal., movie theater—and asked the audiences to name their favorites. Rosenzweig, who says he'll be influenced (if not bound) by the voting, challenges competitors "to do the same—but they'll have to find their own theater!" (Below, l.-r.: C & L stars Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly.)

The Tuesday Night Titan? ↗

One place ABC hopes to reverse its lagging fortunes this fall is on Tuesdays. And the key to its turnaround is the sitcom Who's the Boss? "It's right on the cusp of being a legitimate hit," says ABC Entertainment president Lew Erlicht. Indeed, CBS vice-president Harvey Shephard calls the show "troublesome." However, it's NBC that should be worried: Boss beat NBC's Riptide two out of the three times they went head-to-head last season. (Left: Boss co-stars Judith Light and Tony Danza.)

Ah, Success

Where does a young actor and comedian go after he's named "Comedy Champion" on Star Search? John Kassir (below) parlayed the exposure into a role in the off-Broadway hit "3 Guys Naked from the Waist Down" (don't ask)—and a job as co-host of the syndicated music-video show TV 2000. Through it all, Kassir remains pretty sanguine about his sudden success. "Success doesn't really exist," he says. "We just pretend it does, so we know how much money to hide from the Government." Tax reform, anyone?

Chatterbox

When CNN parted ways with Sandi Freeman in May, the cable channel turned her weeknight time slot over to a radio star: Mutual's late-night interviewer Larry King

(above). "The problem with most talk on TV," he says, "is you have shows that have depended on five guests in an hour and a half." King's format (which is reminiscent of Freeman's) usually devotes the whole hour to a single one-on-one conversation. King thinks it's "ideal. I like to explore people." Besides, he maintains, once you figure in the commercials, "an hour's really only 46 minutes."

Longevity

Actors—and the characters they play—may come and go in daytime, but don't try to tell that to the folks at CBS's As the World Turns. In May, Eileen Fulton (above, right) celebrated her 25th year on the soap as Lisa McColl, the woman you love to hate. Later this year, Henderson Forsythe (above, left) will mark his 25th anniversary in the role of Dr. David Stewart. But if you think that's something, listen to this: also later in '85, Don Hastings (who plays Dr. Bob Hughes) and Patricia Bruder (who plays Ellen Stewart, David's wife) will observe their 25th anniversaries, too. Here's to 25 more for all of them.

Fan-tastic

As Count Antony DiMera on Days of Our Lives (NBC), Thaao Penghlis has developed quite a fan following. This week, he's saying thank you by playing host to the Thaao Penghlis Third Annual Fan Club Dinner at the swank Beverly Hilton hotel in Beverly Hills. (You wouldn't expect a count to rent a fire hall, would you?) Fans can meet and mingle with Penghlis and other DOOL favorites and even win door prizes. The dinner is limited to the first 400, but it's never too late to begin making plans for next year.

Ready for Prime Time?

Jackée Harry (below) is off NBC's Another World temporarily—to tape episodes of the network's new prime-time comedy, 227, on the West Coast. She plans to return to New York—and AW—in October. If 227 is a hit, however, Harry is in for some transcontinental commuting. Is she ready? "I think if it comes to that, I'll cut my wrists," she says—tongue firmly in cheek.

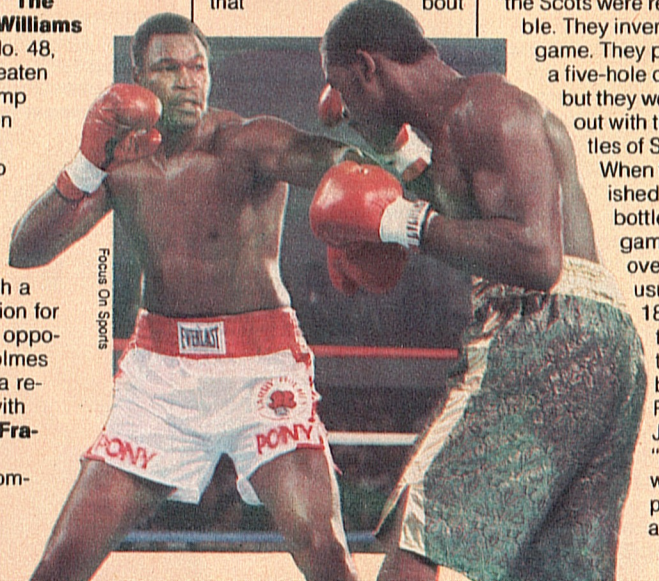
The Year of Living Dangerously

While Pete Rose slashes away at Ty Cobb's "unbreakable" record for total hits in a career, Larry Holmes continues to chase another mark once thought untoppable: Rocky Marciano's 49-0 career record for a heavyweight champion. Despite the fact that Holmes needed a Garrison finish May 20 to make unheralded Carl "The Truth" Williams victim No. 48, the unbeaten IBF champ was soon on the phone to executives at HBO and NBC with a suggestion for his next opponent. Holmes wanted a rematch with Marvis Frazier, a come-from-behind winner over James "The Fighting Cowboy" Tillis on the Holmes-Williams undercard. The network nabobs were less than enthusiastic. They told Holmes to get some rest—then get serious. The first Holmes-Frazier fight did not augur well for another: Holmes (below, left) stopped Joe Frazier's son (below, right) at 2:57 of the first round (Nov. 25, 1983). Indeed, the picture below captures one of the few moments in that bout during which young Frazier was vertical. . . .



Focus On Sports

Here's one from the History Department. NBC's Charlie Jones and actor Jack Lemmon were teamed in a celebrity golf tournament in sunbaked California some weeks back. At the 14th hole—with the temperature hovering near triple figures—Jones gasped to his partner, "Who invented 18 holes? Why couldn't we play 13 or 14?" Lemmon didn't attend Harvard for nothing. "Charlie," he answered, "the Scots were responsible. They invented the game. They played on a five-hole course, but they would go out with three bottles of Scotch. When they finished the third bottle, the game was over. And it usually took 18 [holes] to finish the booze." Replied Jones, "Jack, I wish they'd passed out after 12."

REVIEWS

The latest compilation of vintage cartoons from Walt Disney Productions, How the Best Was Won: 1933-1960 (Walt Disney Home Video; $29.95), though cleverly labeled, is actually somewhat less than was promised. Two of the cartoons in this batch of five—1935's "Three Orphan Kittens" and 1938's "Ferdinand the Bull"—did indeed win Academy Awards, and two others were nominees. However, 1934's saccharine-sweet "Funny Little Bunnies" (above) failed to come even close to award-worthy status. Take that as a clue, because, overall, almost all of these animated shorts lack the fabled Disney sparkle, humor and strong storyline. Compared to most cartoons, this collection is still pretty good kidvid; it's just not very good Disney.

NEW RELEASES

Into the Night (MCA Home Video; $79.95) stars Jeff Goldblum (below) and Michelle Pfeiffer in a fast-paced comedy-mystery. More than a dozen notable Hollywood directors have cameos.

The Falcon and the Snowman (Vestron Video; $79.95) is a gripping tale of cold-war espionage with fine performances by Timothy Hutton and Sean Penn. Jack Lemmon's equally fine performance lifts Mass Appeal (MCA Home Video; $79.95), a drama about a clash of values involving a priest and a seminarian.

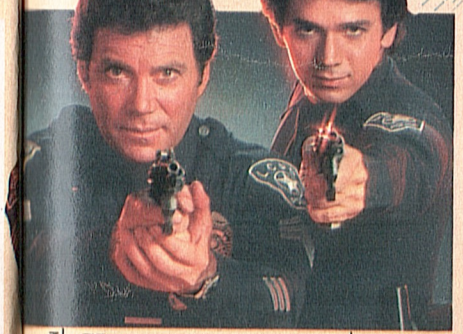
CHEERS 'N' JEERS



Mario Casilli

Cheers

To CBS, for picking up ABC's recently canceled prime-time series T.J. Hooker (starring William Shatner and Adrian Zmed, l.-r., above) and giving it a late-night time slot. Hooker's second career as a moonlighter is good news for its fans (especially those with VCRs), and perhaps will establish a successful precedent for other marginally rated shows.

Jeers

To ABC, for the steady diet of sex and violence it served up during May's sweeps period. We saw: a machine-gun massacre (Dynasty); a killer who also rapes and tortures ("A Death in California"); a doctor who terrifies and seemingly hankers to kill his wife ("Deadly Intentions"); an abusive father shot by a vengeful son ("Right to Kill?"); and the rape of a man ("The Rape of Richard Beck"). Whew! There were some good performances and ratings, but by month's end, we were ready for some Happy Days reruns.

Jeers

To Major League Baseball, for bending to network pressure and decreeing that all World Series games be played at night. It's a smart move ratings-wise, but it leaves the fans—especially those of the Chicago Cubs, whose Wrigley Field has no lights—out in the cold.

Cheers

And a big bouquet, too, to Kate Jackson (below). Sharp-eyed viewers have noticed that the star of CBS's Scarecrow and Mrs. King sets a good example by buckling her seat belt during the show's driving sequences—even during the scariest car chases. (The bad guys usually ride unrestrained.) Jackson's is one prime-time shtick worth emulating. END

News Update

Hostage Crisis Brings Change In News Ratings

Intense interest in the plight of the Americans held hostage in Lebanon has changed the ratings picture for the networks' evening news broadcasts. The total number of news viewers increased by seven per cent during the week ending June 23. CBS, already a strong No. 1, was the big gainer, enlarging its audience by an impressive 11 per cent. Perhaps even more significant, however, was ABC's seven-per-cent rise, which moved it ahead of NBC into second place. With anchor Tom Brokaw vacationing in Africa, NBC gained by only one per cent. CBS had an average rating of 12.3; ABC scored 10.2 and NBC 9.9.

William Lord, executive producer of ABC's World News Tonight, said that Peter Jennings' "intimate understanding of the story based on his six years in Beirut" was crucial to the network's success.

Tim Russert, NBC's vice-president for news, downplayed the effect of Brokaw's absence. "When we have someone of Roger Mudd's caliber," he said, "there is no reason at all to contact Brokaw. We never asked that he come back." But Brokaw, as it turned out, couldn't stand being away from such an important story. Eleven days after the hijacking, he left Kenya to fly to Beirut and go back to work.

All three network anchors put in long hours. At CBS, Dan Rather worked almost nonstop, doing 44 of CBS's 52 special reports, and continuing to appear on the evening news on his days off. Jennings worked more than 12 hours a day and did almost all of ABC's 46 special reports. On NBC, Mudd and five correspondents did 66 special reports.

ABC may have added to its newsgathering reputation by gaining an exclusive interview with the captive TWA flight crew.

Cable News Network also gained viewers during the crisis. Its ratings on the first weekend were the highest in the cable service's history. A spokesman attributed the increase to CNN's being first with many stories, including a live news conference in which four stewardesses gave details of the hijacking. CNN does not rely on a single anchorperson, but rotates 15 anchor teams.

Summer Music Show for ABC

ABC has scheduled eight episodes of a new summer music series, produced by Dick Clark. The program, Rock 'n' Roll Summer Action, will be telecast on Wednesdays at 8 P.M. (ET) starting July 17, and will be set against a Malibu Beach backdrop. Christopher Atkins will be the host. ABC, which is trailing in summer ratings, thinks this youth-oriented series will do well against Highway to Heaven.

Small World?

Dallas is seeking to cast a mystery woman for next season. She'd be in her early 30s, possibly European and definitely a love interest for the newest Ewing, Jack (played by Dack Rambo). More interesting, perhaps, is that one of the contenders for the role is Ginger Alden, who was Elvis Presley's fiancée at the time of his death. If chosen, she'd be co-starring with Elvis's ex-wife, Priscilla Beaulieu Presley, who plays Jenna Wade.

All in the Family

Next season's ABC spinoff Dynasty II: The Colbys will feature two female characters patterned after Dynasty's Krystle and Alexis—only here they'll be named Anthea and Sable, respectively. And among the actresses whom the producers are said to be most interested in for either role are Faye Dunaway, Kim Novak, Angie Dickinson and Elizabeth Taylor. Co-executive producer Esther Shapiro has reportedly gone to London to sound out Dunaway. Other roles still unfilled include Anthea's husband, Jason Colby (Burt Lancaster turned it down), their 21-year-old daughter Bliss and Bliss's twin siblings, Max and Monica.

On—and Off—The Hook

Adrian Zmed (pictured in this week's Cheers 'n' Jeers column, page 23) is now out of the picture and James Darren is in as William Shatner's sidekick for those new, low-budget episodes of T.J. Hooker on CBS next season. Insiders say that Zmed declined a cut in salary. So now Darren will wind up with more money than was originally offered him—and there'll be enough left over to cast a new actor as a young police recruit. As for Heather Locklear (Grapevine, June 8), a deal's being worked out that would allow her to shuttle between her roles on Hooker and Dynasty.

Perfect Reply

It seems some of the rich and famous like to keep their life styles to themselves. Take Jamie Lee Curtis, for example. When Malcolm Boyes, a writer-reporter for the syndicated series Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous, turned up at a Hollywood health spa to shoot a piece about celebrity fitness, Curtis was there promoting her new movie "Perfect." "I'd like to interview you for the show," offered Boyes. "What show's that?" she asked. He told her. "I hate your show!" Curtis told him. "I hated your movie but I'll talk to you anyway," countered Boyes. At which point the actress turned on her heel and left.

Grapecheer

To Today's Jane Pauley, for graciously terminating an interview with Jill Brown, wife of one of the TWA hostages, after Mrs. Brown became visibly upset discussing her husband Robert's ordeal. Pauley explained that she and NBC did not wish to exploit her guest's feelings. On the other hand . . . .

Grapejeer

To those TV stations that chose to run a photo of the badly beaten body of Navy diver Robert Stethem, who was slain by the hijackers. For Stethem's family and friends, such an insensitive display could have only compounded their grief.

CAN WE TALK BACK?

I found it ironic that Joan Rivers would brag about revealing Victoria Principal's age and then would play coy with her own age ["Can She Talk? Can She Ever!" June 8].

Gerard F. Keogh Jr.
West Orange, N.J.

TV GUIDE stated that Rivers is "deliciously wicked" or "raunchy and disgusting," depending on your viewpoint. How about "boring"?

Kathleen Fowler
Oklahoma City, Okla.

When Rivers jokes about a celebrity's weight, she tells viewers it's OK to slur anyone who is fat. Anti-fat bigotry is America's last permissible prejudice, and the fact that a celebrity of Rivers' stature encourages it is shameful!

In a remote, walled-off corner of the Elysian fields, composer Antonio Salieri's press agent is skipping like a lamb. "Didn't I always tell you, Tony? One of these days, you'll get equal billing with old what's-his-face!"

After "Amadeus," it was inevitable. If Mozart had a rival—and who wasn't hypnotized by Milos Forman's movie into seeing Salieri in that role?—then the rival's music would have to be dusted off and given an airing, preferably side by side with the works of the master. Gerard Schwarz, who will be conducting Wednesday's Live from Lincoln Center concert featuring works by both men, frankly admits, "Had there been no movie, we probably wouldn't be on television."

The concert opens, cutely, with two overtures that had their premieres on the same night in 1786: Salieri's "Prima la musica e poi le parole" and Mozart's "The Impresario." For further comparison, soprano Elly Ameling sings two arias; and a piano concerto (No. 24) by Wolfgang Amadeus faces off against part of a concerto for oboe and flute by Antonio. In addition, the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra plays the great "Haffner" symphony and—in a U.S. premiere—Mozart's recently unearthed Symphony in A Minor. Next year, the Solely Salieri Festival?

Mozart also crops up in the unlikely context of a documentary about fears of nuclear war. In Living Double Lives, narrator Colleen Dewhurst introduces us to a conductor in Charlottesville, Va., who each year stages a concert of choral music as a gesture of her concern for the future. Her aim is to influence not the presidents and prime ministers of the world, but local people who may have decided that Armageddon was inevitable. The program shows how she and many other folks in Charlottesville are working in small but meaningful ways to break the spell of planetary despair.

A quick roundup of the week's non-Mozart items: Wimbledon Tennis reaches its climax on Saturday and Sunday. . . . The fourth annual Old Timers Baseball Classic brings the likes of Hank Aaron, Joe DiMaggio, Juan Marichal and Brooks Robinson to the capital's RFK Stadium for a rerun of former glories. . . . An unusually zany episode of Miami Vice brightens the screen in a welcome summer encore. . . . And the dizzyingly articulate Prof. Stephen Jay Gould expatiates once again, in a memorable Nova program, on the logic of evolution.

ON CABLE

Back to Mozart and a 12-year-old production of The Marriage of Figaro, taped at England's tony Glyndebourne Festival. The cast (notably Ileana Cotrubas, Frederica von Stade and Kiri Te Kanawa) constitutes the draw here. What you mustn't demand is spectacle. Glyndebourne's diminutive apron stage provides little more than a parking space for an opera that could happily spread itself over the center court at Wimbledon.

In some areas broadcast programs may not be seen on the days indicated. For times and channels of cable shows, see program listings.

This is one of those clean-out-the-film-cupboards network-movie weeks.

The week's one newcomer, 1980's The Competition, will have 31 of its 129 minutes cut "for time and standards." Hard to tell whether that will harm or help this story of young concert pianists—chief among them Richard Dreyfuss and Amy Irving—competing for a major prize. The two stars mime the piano playing very well indeed (Chester B. Swiatowski provided Dreyfuss's sound; Daniel Pollack, Irving's) and give basic credibility to their on-and-off romance, but sticky sentimentality, mechanical plotting and banal dialogue manage to drown out even the music.

Top of the repeats is, of course, 1979's Norma Rae, on its third run, marked by Sally Field's Oscar-winning portrait of a Southern textile worker whose social consciousness is raised by her friendship with a union organizer. On its fourth run there's 1977's The Bad News Bears in Breaking Training, a rip-'em-off sequel that plays like a fifth-rate sitcom without the laugh track.

Three of the six TV-movies on their second runs are worth the watching if you missed them. 1982's Coming Out of the Ice tells of American-born Victor Herman, who, taken to Russia by his parents in 1931, subsequently refused to surrender his citizenship and thereafter underwent the horrors of Soviet prisons and Siberian labor camps. The performances are more impressive than the unsatisfying script. 1984's Second Sight: A Love Story is the strive-and-succeed tale of a woman who, blind for 20 years, achieves personal fulfillment thanks to a lover and a seeing-eye dog. And 1983's Night Partners offers Yvette Mimieux and Diana Canova as housewife volunteers in a police-coordinated program for crime victims.

Three other repeats are even more predictable and pat. 1982's Hear No Evil has a detective battling deafness and crime; 1982's Born Beautiful warns that top modeling is a temporal thing; and 1983's Policewoman Centerfold holds that posing in the nude is liberating.

ON CABLE

If you're tired of hi-tech computerized fantasy, 1984's The Neverending Story offers the magic of the imagination. Its detailing of a young warrior's quest to save the kingdom of Fantasia is for dreamers of all ages. For grown-ups, 1984's The Pope of Greenwich Village offers an absorbing caper with Mickey Rourke and Eric Roberts two hustlers and Geraldine Page super as the doting mom of a crooked cop. And 1983's Entre Nous is a fascinating story of two women whose friendship completely changes their lives.

The most inflammatory question of our time.

"Hey, would you put out that cigarette?"

Just seven little words. But in today's over-heated climate of opinion, they can make sparks fly.

For with all the rhetoric about "second-hand smoke," many non-smokers are beginning to feel not just bothered but threatened by cigarettes.

And with all the talk about anti-smoking legislation, many smokers are beginning to feel threatened by non-smokers.

This is not exactly a recipe for social harmony. In fact, it's practically a guarantee of further discord.

Since we have discussed scientific aspects of the "passive smoking" controversy in previous messages, we'd like to focus here on the social questions.

Will more confrontation or more segregation produce less abrasion? Do we solve anything by creating yet another way to divide our society? Shouldn't all of us be wary of inviting government to involve itself further in our private lives?

At R.J. Reynolds, we see an alternative.

We think we should start not by raising barriers, but by lowering our voices. We think smokers and non-smokers can work out their differences together, in a spirit of tolerance and fairness and respect for each other's rights and feelings. We think common courtesy can succeed where coercion is bound to fail.

And maybe, after we have learned peaceful coexistence by talking to each other civilly and sensibly, we can apply the same approach to our many other problems.

Because, after all, this is hardly the most inflammatory question of our time.

I like Joan Rivers. She has struggled long and hard to attain success in a field dominated by men—quickly, how many successful standup comediennes can you name? Even if she makes barbed jokes about other performers, she is equally hard on herself.

Norma Anousheh
Front Royal, Va.

Sure, Rivers is abrasive at times, but let's face it: we all can identify with what she says. We all know or knew a Heidi Abromowitz . . . and Rivers has a way of dragging information out of the stars on The Tonight Show that we, as viewers, would ask for if we had the opportunity.

Jane Rorrer
Mount Washington, Md.

To quote someone near and dear to Joan Rivers' heart: "Oh, grow up!" When is Joan going to realize that she has become a parody of herself? People are no longer laughing at her material, they're laughing at her.

Jon R. McKenzie
Bellflower, Cal.

MY MOTHER THE CRITIC

Jeers to my son the editor, who "cheered" the return of Barbara Bel Geddes to the role of Miss Ellie on Dallas ["Cheers 'n' Jeers," June 8]. Not only do I think Donna Reed is as good an actress, but I also think she looks a lot better with Howard Keel, who plays her husband Clayton, than the dowdy Miss Bel Geddes!

Edith G. Friedman
Newton Highlands, Mass.

[Mrs. Friedman's son the editor replies: C'mon, Ma, now I know how Hill Street's Mick Belker feels when his ma bugs him at work! Seriously—you're entitled to your opinion, even though we (obviously) couldn't agree more. And though you've now embarrassed me in front of nearly 43 million TV GUIDE readers, there's absolutely no truth to the rumor that I've hired Barbara Bel Geddes to replace you next season. Say hi to Dad. Love, Dick.]

WIMBLEDON TENNIS
SAT. 8 AM (5)
9 AM (6) (8)
SUN. 6 AM (6) (8)
8 AM (5)

Final-round coverage of the 108th All-England Tennis Championships, telecast live from the London suburb of Wimbledon.

Saturday: Last year, Martina Navratilova was considered a shoo-in to win her third straight Wimbledon title. She disappointed no one. In fact, Navratilova has been so dominant at Wimbledon that she hasn't lost a set here in two years. Although she is considered a favorite to win again, an old foe has re-emerged to temporarily tarnish her armor of invincibility. By beating Navratilova in last month's French Open, Chris Evert Lloyd earned an unprecedented co-No. 1 seeding here with the defending champ and seeks to add another laurel to her own storied career.

Sunday: The heavy favorite to win the men's title is, of course, John McEnroe, the two-time defending champ who routed Jimmy Connors in last year's final. Like Navratilova, McEnroe is also coming off a defeat at the French Open, the only event and only surface (clay) he hasn't mastered. But Mac has dominated this tourney because his game revolves around a devastating serve—and his serve can be fatal on Wimbledon's fast grass courts.

Dick Enberg, Bud Collins, JoAnne Russell and Stan Smith are the commentators.

PURPLE RAIN

Rock star Prince got a royal reception from audiences and critics alike for his screen debut in this 1984 morality tale—and walked off with an Academy Award for his song score.

Combining on-stage histrionics with backstage drama, director Albert Magnoli's semibiographical film tells the story of a talented but self-absorbed musician known simply as The Kid (Prince). Driven to break away from his abusive father (Clarence Williams III) and make it to the top, The Kid seeks solace in the adoration of fans by performing at a Minneapolis club. There, he competes for the spotlight with an archrival rocker (Morris Day), a challenge that spills off-stage when an ambitious and sexy new singer (Apollonia Kotero) arrives on the scene.

Rated R for strong language, sexual situations and violence. Songs include "When Doves Cry," "Let's Go Crazy" and "Purple Rain." Mother: Olga Karlatos. Billy: Billy Sparks. Members of the bands the Revolution, the Time and Apollonia 6 play themselves. (1 hr., 50 min.)

Anytime you can get 11 records or tapes for a penny—that's a steal! And that's exactly what you get if you join the Columbia Record & Tape Club under this offer. To get your 11 albums right away, simply fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest…plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you'd prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card that is always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records that you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So you risk nothing by acting now!

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more selections (instead of 8) in the next three years. Just check the box in the application and fill in number of the selection you want.

THE YEAR OF LIVING DANGEROUSLY

Mel Gibson and Sigourney Weaver star in an atmospheric 1982 political thriller from Australian director Peter Weir ("Gallipoli").

It's set in Indonesia during the fall of the Sukarno regime in 1965 and focuses on two Westerners: Australian journalist Guy Hamilton (Gibson), who's trying to build a reputation as a gutsy correspondent, and Jill Bryant (Weaver), an assistant to a British military attaché with access to information about Indonesia's turbulent political situation. Guy gets to meet Jill—and eventually falls in love with her—through the efforts of his Chinese-Australian photographer Billy Kwan (actress Linda Hunt in an Oscar-winning performance), a man deeply affected by the misery around him. Billy tries to instill in Guy a sense of moral responsibility, but comes to feel betrayed when the young reporter seems interested only in doing his job.

Written by Weir, David Williamson and C.J. Koch; based on Koch's award-winning 1978 novel. Supporting Cast . . . Pete: Michael Murphy. Wally: Noel Ferrier. Kevin: Paul Sonkila. Col. Henderson: Bill Kerr. Kumar: Bembol Roco. Tiger Lily: Kuh Ledesma. (2 hrs.)

MOSTLY MOZART MEETS SALIERI

Soprano Elly Ameling and pianist Horacio Gutierrez join conductor Gerard Schwarz and the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra in a concert telecast from New York City's Avery Fisher Hall.

This concert "reunites" composers Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756-1791) and the prolific if lesser known Antonio Salieri (1750-1825), Austrian contemporaries whose bitter rivalry was dramatized in the Oscar-winning 1984 film "Amadeus."

In the Salieri works on this program, Elly Ameling sings "Non temer" from the opera "La fiera de Venezia" (one of 50 operas Salieri composed); and the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra performs the overture to "Prima la musica a poi le parole" and the Concerto in C Major for Flute and Oboe.

The orchestra's Mozart selections: the Piano Concerto No. 24 in C Minor (featuring Horacio Gutierrez); the concert aria "Voi avete un cor fedele" (featuring Ameling); the overture to "Der Schauspieldirektor"; the Symphony No. 35 in D Major ("Haffner"); and the recently discovered Symphony in A Minor, reputedly the first symphony Mozart composed. Crockett and Tubbs yield the spotlight to Switek and Zito (Michael Talbott and John Diehl), whose friendship is tested on a fencing operation at work and by a delicate living arrangement at home.

After a fire levels Zito's ramshackle home, he takes up residence with Switek and his chronically discontented girlfriend Darlene (Ellen Greene)—who's also Zito's former flame. On the job, Zito's continuing bad luck blows the duo's cover and forces them to enlist jive-talking, street-hustling informants Noogie Lamont and Izzy Moreno (Charlie Barnett and Martin Ferrero). Although Noogie and Izzy's tenure as law enforcers is short-lived, it does put them on to what could be the biggest score of their young and innocent lives.

Air Force
A great way of life.

B-2

Now. For the future.

Technology is moving faster than science fiction. And, it's more exciting. But to be part of it—to make it work—we have to learn. We have to grow.

The Air Force has thousands of fascinating opportunities. Many in technologies still being developed. But, young Americans will be left out if they're not prepared.

It takes training to use technology. The Air Force offers such training. But only to those who can handle it. Those who have taken advanced courses in math and science.

We've got a choice. America's youth can watch technological developments being made. Or they can help make them. Encourage our children to AIM HIGH. To tackle the tough courses. Then they'll be equipped to tackle the future.

America and the Air Force of tomorrow are depending on them.

They Laughed When He Sat Down at the Bar

...and that's how George Wendt turned a minor role in Cheers into full-blown stardom

By Kenneth Turan

This may come as something of a shock to the claque that backs Cliff, Carla and the sadly departed Coach, not to mention devotees of the ups and downs of Diane and Sam, but the rock upon which NBC's Cheers is built, the all-too-solid core of what might be the sharpest comedy on television, just may be none other than accountant-without-portfolio Norm Peterson, a man with time on his hands and beer on his mind.

That's right, "Hey Nooorm," the wiseacre barroom regular with a body that makes Nautilus instructors tremble, who hasn't had a steady job since the Red Sox won the pennant, whose marriage to the ever-absent Vera started off in a honeymoon suite he calls The Dead Zone. That Norm.

Most surprised by that bit of news were the show's trio of creators: writers Glen and Les Charles, universally referred to as "the boys," and director James Burrows. Sitting around a comfortable office on the Paramount lot, ruminating about everybody's favorite elbow-bender, they stunned even themselves by concluding, as Les Charles tentatively put it, "maybe he is the center of the show. He's the least volatile, the hardest character in the world to change, the person the theme song is about. Maybe this series is about Norm."

It certainly didn't start out that way. The original Norm concept, Les Charles admits, called for "just a guy who is going to have just one and ends up staying the whole night. We didn't ever envision it to be this big a part of the show." What made the difference? "Laughs," says Glen Charles. "He started getting laughs."

George Wendt, the actor behind Norm, has made a habit of getting laughs the way scofflaws get parking tickets: casually, without so much as a second thought. "He has great throwaway delivery; some guys throw away lines, he throws away his whole performance," says Les Charles. John Ratzenberger, who plays best-buddy Cliff, talks about the way Wendt "makes good comedy look so effortless. He just knows what's right. Even on the first day we read a script, he'll lean over and whisper to me about certain lines, 'That'll be cut,' and sure enough it's gone the next day. Whatever he has, he didn't have to learn it anywhere. He was born with it." Adds co-star Ted Danson, who plays Sam, "When we're rehearsing, part of me has got my eye on George to check myself out as we're working; he's really good at letting me know when I'm going too far or not far enough."

If Norm were presented with a setup like that, he'd have the perfect retort. George Wendt is more likely to smile mischievously and say something like: "Norm has better writers than I do." Though he admits to more than a passing fondness for beer—"I'm not that good an actor"—Wendt's resemblance to his role goes no further than the surface. "My life is nothing like Norm's," he says, pointing out that he doesn't hang out in bars ("This isn't a bar town") and has a much better relationship with his wife, actress Bernadette Birkett, than Norm has with his wife, Vera. He describes Norm as "a little dumber, a little cruder, a little slimier, a little more spineless" than the actor who plays him.

It's not that George Wendt isn't funny. He is, and very much so. But his whole persona is quieter, he runs at a more thoughtful, less high-powered speed, down a couple of notches from Norm. As Wendt wanders around the planned chaos of the Cheers set in a pair of Nikes, wearing an oxford shirt that billows outside his jeans and chewing on a celery stalk—"He does not avoid food," says co-star Rhea Perlman (Carla)—no sense of stardom prowls with him. Even during a run-through, when he's not even breaking a sweat, his impeccable delivery results in laughter. And when he slides with surprising physical grace onto his particular stool, it's like he was born there, discovered behind a demolished wall, ready to hoist a few with the best of them.

Though he grew up in Chicago and plays a Boston sharpie, the 36-year-old Wendt is possessed of an unabashedly suburban soul. "I sort of feel out of it in terms of haircuts and clothes," is his reaction to hip L.A. boîtes. "I'm more of a Valley kind of guy. I like a little bit of Peoria." So it's no surprise that he delights in time spent in swimming pools, anyone's, anywhere ("I must have been a manatee in my former life") and is a believer in back-yard cookouts as well. "He's a legendary barbecue chef," says John Ratzenberger. "Everyone else will be partying and he's sitting next to his Weber, his ear up against it, not moving for three hours, listening to the damn thing cook. All of a sudden he'll get up and pour an ounce of beer in there real fast. 'They tell me when they're done,' he claims."

Even more unexpectedly, George Wendt is a keen student of current events. Though years of doing topical satire with the Second City troupe sharpened his appetite, newspapers, he says, "are in my blood. My grandfather was a superstar of yellow journalism; the equipment he used to take the famous hidden-camera photograph of the execution of Ruth Snyder is in the Smithsonian." So Wendt reads a minimum of four papers daily, plus the trade press: "USA Today would have been the deal breaker. My wife said, 'One more newspaper and the marriage is kaput'." The result, testifies Ratzenberger, has turned his colleague into "Paul Bunyan with the soul of Bertrand Russell, a very easygoing guy with a finely honed intelligence, which I didn't realize until he whipped my keister in Trivial Pursuit."

Certainly such cerebral prowess could not have been predicted for Wendt, even though his academic career started at such a strict Jesuit prep school that college at Notre Dame was "like Sodom and Gomorrah to me." Wendt so enjoyed himself both on and off campus that he neg- → lected to take his finals one semester, got an 0.0 grade-point average, and ended up graduating from somewhere else. After that, "not motivated to do anything but have fun," Wendt decided to "drop back 15 yards and punt," which meant traveling through Europe on a minimum of money, "as close as I wanted to be to the process of figuring out what to do with the rest of my life.

"Those times were so relaxing, I can't believe it now," Wendt remembers. "The big three occupations were doing your laundry, brushing your teeth and writing post cards. Laundry was always a spotty proposition, you were lucky if you brushed your teeth, and if you wrote a post card, boy, you really accomplished something that day."

After "two years and change" of that kind of life, Wendt decided "this was it for running away, I'd had enough. I used the process of elimination: I went down as many occupations as I could think of—teacher, doctor, accountant—trying to figure out 'What don't I hate?' I'd gone to Second City in Chicago a lot during my college days. I thought, 'Boy, that looks like I wouldn't hate it. And I'm pretty sure they get paid.' It was the first time I had any inkling of being determined to do anything in life."

Wendt ended up spending a half dozen years, from 1974 to 1980, with the improvisation-minded Second City, long enough to be fired, rehired, booed off stage ("really mortifying, the low point of my career") and meet his wife, fellow comic actor Birkett. Wendt had done an unsuccessful TV pilot called "Nothing but Comedy," with other Second City members, which got NBC interested in him, if not the show. Then, with the strong encouragement of his wife, who felt they could both do better in Los Angeles, the move to the Coast, complete with the couple's two sons (daughter Hilary was born this year), was made.

It would be nice to say Wendt immediately flourished in Hollywood, but it wouldn't be true. "I was so wired after the high pressure, gung-ho atmosphere of Second City that doing two days on a sitcom and that's it for six months was traumatic," he explains. "I went kind of crazy; I holed up in the house for months like a hermit, sitting around in my gym shorts watching TV." Again it was his wife who made the difference: "She kind of snapped me out of it. I was turning into just a lump."

One of Wendt's brief TV bits was as an exterminator on Taxi, in which the Charles brothers and James Burrows were involved. So, when they were casting the Cheers pilot, everyone felt so strongly that Wendt would be perfect as Norm that he was cast even though he was involved in another series, Making the Grade, and might not be available for the full season. "Fortunately for us," says Glen Charles, "Making the Grade didn't" and a bulky legend was born.

Wendt is fairly dispassionate about his weight, officially listed as 235 pounds. Though he says, "I wish I were thinner and I certainly don't want to get any fatter," he knows that, as a character type, "I have it lucky, I don't have to worry about losing hair, crow's-feet or putting on weight." And his size certainly hasn't hurt his film career: Wendt has appeared in supporting roles in "Dreamscape," "Thief of Hearts," "No Small Affair" and the current "Fletch," where he plays such a sleazy slob "I didn't have to worry about spilling ketchup on my shirt during lunch; the grubbier the better." The poundage is a bit of a problem when Wendt goes out in public—"I cut a mean profile, shades won't hide that, my figure makes it hard to escape detection"—but in general, Wendt has remarkably few of the usual series-star hangups about overexposure, typecasting and the like.

"I can't worry too much about the future," he explains. "This is now, and in the opinion of a lot of folks Cheers is the coolest comedy on TV. It may be a depressing thought, but I may never again wind up with a role as cool as Norm. This is it. It doesn't get any better." Not even neglecting your teeth across the length and breadth of Europe was quite this much fun. (END)

Baseball's Designated Kidders

Boy, Do They Have Their Innings—with Jell-O, Matches and Soap Shavings

Players get through the long season by amusing themselves with outrageous pranks that spare no one

By Gary Morgenstein

Baseball players have enough to worry about, with 90-mph beanballs, windblown homers and bad-hop grounders. Do they really need to fret about hotfoots in the dugout and shaving cream on the phone, water balloons from the sky and Jell-O in the bathtub, brownies in the glove and apples in the jock? You bet they do.

"When you get 25 guys together for six months," says Bert Blyleven of the Cleveland Indians, "you'd better have some fun or you'll go nuts."

What Blyleven is talking about is the wonderful, sometimes dangerous world of baseball's practical jokers, where the creations of nature and the inventions of man come together to make a sitcom pilot out of life's simplest endeavors. Like getting dressed.

"A guy might find anything in his locker," says the Chicago Cubs' George Frazier. "If he's afraid of snakes, there'll be a live snake, or any kind of living animal he's afraid of, in his glove, or hat, or uniform. Or there're enough other things—like putting Vaseline in his mitt, or gluing his spikes, hat, or dress shoes to the floor—to keep us happy. One of my personal favorites, besides tying pant legs together, is sneaking up and dropping an apple in a guy's jock just as he's putting it on. Oh, then there's slipping a coat hanger on his back belt loops, so when he sits down in the dugout—well, it's pretty funny to see."

If a player's not looking behind to see what he might be sitting on, he'd be well advised to look down for the all-time dugout favorite, the hotfoot. Now, the hotfoot comes in a number of ways. There's sticking a lighted match in the shoe, there's lighting laces, there's putting a cigarette in gum and igniting the concoction on a shoe, and there's Mrs. First Baseman Flambé.

"Mike Hargrove [Indians' first baseman] warned me if I ever gave him a hotfoot, he'd get into my locker and destroy everything I own," says the Cubs' Rick Sutcliffe, fondly remembering his days in Cleveland. "Well, he didn't say anything about his wife Susan. There was a wives' charity softball game before one of ours, so I snuck down to the dugout and lit Susan's laces. She doesn't notice anything, is just talking away, and then she goes out to home plate for the introductions. By the time she gets out there, there's a goodly flame coming up from her shoe. She manages to beat out the flame, then comes after me and starts beating out me. But, no, Mike never did anything to me. After all, I didn't do anything to him."

Most people look at food as something to eat. To a baseball joker, that depends on what's in it, and where you put it.

"I once bet a guy he couldn't gulp down a hot dog in one bite without dropping crumbs," says Oakland's Steve McCatty. "I didn't tell him I put soap shavings in the frank. He gulps it in one bite, no crumbs, and then great big soap bubbles come out of his mouth. Nah, I didn't pay off—the guy spit out the hot dog!"

"Steve Garvey gets crazy if anyone touches his equipment," says Los Angeles's Jay Johnstone. "In San Francisco once, some girls brought brownies down to us and I put one of them in Garvey's glove, put the infield practice ball back in the glove's pocket, and then looked to hide. Before I hide, I have to get rid of all this chocolate on my fingers, so I sit next to Jerry Reuss and rub the chocolate off on his leg. Then I tell [manager Tommy] Lasorda I broke my jock and head back to the clubhouse, only I sneak to the Giants bullpen to watch the fun.

"Garvey takes the field in the bottom of the first, but instead of putting his glove right on, he sticks it under his arm so he can put on his sunglasses. Now the brownie's squished and disgusting inside the glove. Garvey slips his hand in there, feels something, and comes out with brownie goosh, which he very quickly gets on the ball, his uniform, everything. After holding up the game, Garvey's finally clean—but furious. He storms into the dugout after the inning and demands to know who touched his glove. No one knows, but Garvey sees the chocolate on Reuss's leg, jumps on him and starts pounding him on the chest, yelling 'I told you never to touch my equipment!' "

Then there's shaving cream. Shaving cream in hotel beds with the sheets pulled up. Shaving cream on phones to surprise an innocent caller. Shaving cream on a plate, used as a pie in the face by Sutcliffe on Blyleven during a live television interview. And shaving cream on a poor rookie who's just fallen victim to the "Three Man Lift."

"You tell a rookie that the strongest guy on the team can lift three people at once," says Cincinnati's Dave Parker. "You get the rookie lying on the floor, with a → guy on either side, so the kid's arms and legs are locked on both sides. Then this supposed strongest guy is to lift all of them locked together, high enough to get a baseball underneath. Not a chance. Now that you've got the rookie where he can't move, you unzip his fly and put all manner of items down there—shaving cream, after-shave lotion, pop, cold coffee—you don't want anyone getting hurt."

Come on, fellas, enough's enough already. You'll draw the line, won't you, at bothering a manager who's just lost a tough game and come back to the hotel, wanting only gloomy sleep, and hoping not to be disturbed? Getting him riled would be not only mean, but dangerous—right? It was neither to the perpetrators of the infamous "Seattle Jell-O Caper."

"When I was with Seattle, some of the guys got [then] manager Rene Lachemann's room key, and went in and took out all his clothes, removed all the light bulbs, took the mouthpiece from the phone and filled the sink and bathtub with Jell-O," says Toronto's Bill Caudill. "So Lachemann comes in, tries the light—nothing. Now he's in the dark. He can't get undressed because he has no clothes, though he couldn't see where they were anyway. He can't wash up because there's Jell-O in the bathroom, and when he phones down to the desk clerk, the guy there can't hear Lachemann ranting and raving—but the guys who were listening on the other side of the door could. Lachemann was so disgusted he slept on the floor. Naked. And worse, all year he never knew who did it. Finally, at the end of the season, we had a 'Guess Who Mr. Jell-O Is?' party. Lachemann thought it was me because he'd heard me on the radio the night before talking about a similar stunt. Only I'd pulled that one on someone else."

There should be certain sacred areas exempt from a practical joker's pranks—like money worries. Tell that to Minnesota's Mickey Hatcher, who'd leave a message slip in a locker with the number of the San Diego Zoo and a note that, "Mr. Bear from the Nike Shoe Company wants to talk to you about endorsements." Well, at least practical jokers have sympathy for struggling teams, don't they? Not if they're baseball's "Mad Bomber," they don't.

"I had this water-balloon launcher, two oil-can funnels taped together at the thin end, 10 feet of tape running through and dangling at the sides, so you had a slingshot effect," says George Frazier. "Last season, when I was with Cleveland, we came into Milwaukee and the poor Brewers, they were disintegrating, 13 games out, and they'd scheduled extra batting practice, which me and Blyleven decided to attend to cheer things up. I attached my launcher to two pillars on the third-base side, upper deck, and hid while Bert sat in front of me, supposedly reading a magazine, but really giving me firing directions—'Two degrees to the left,' and so on.

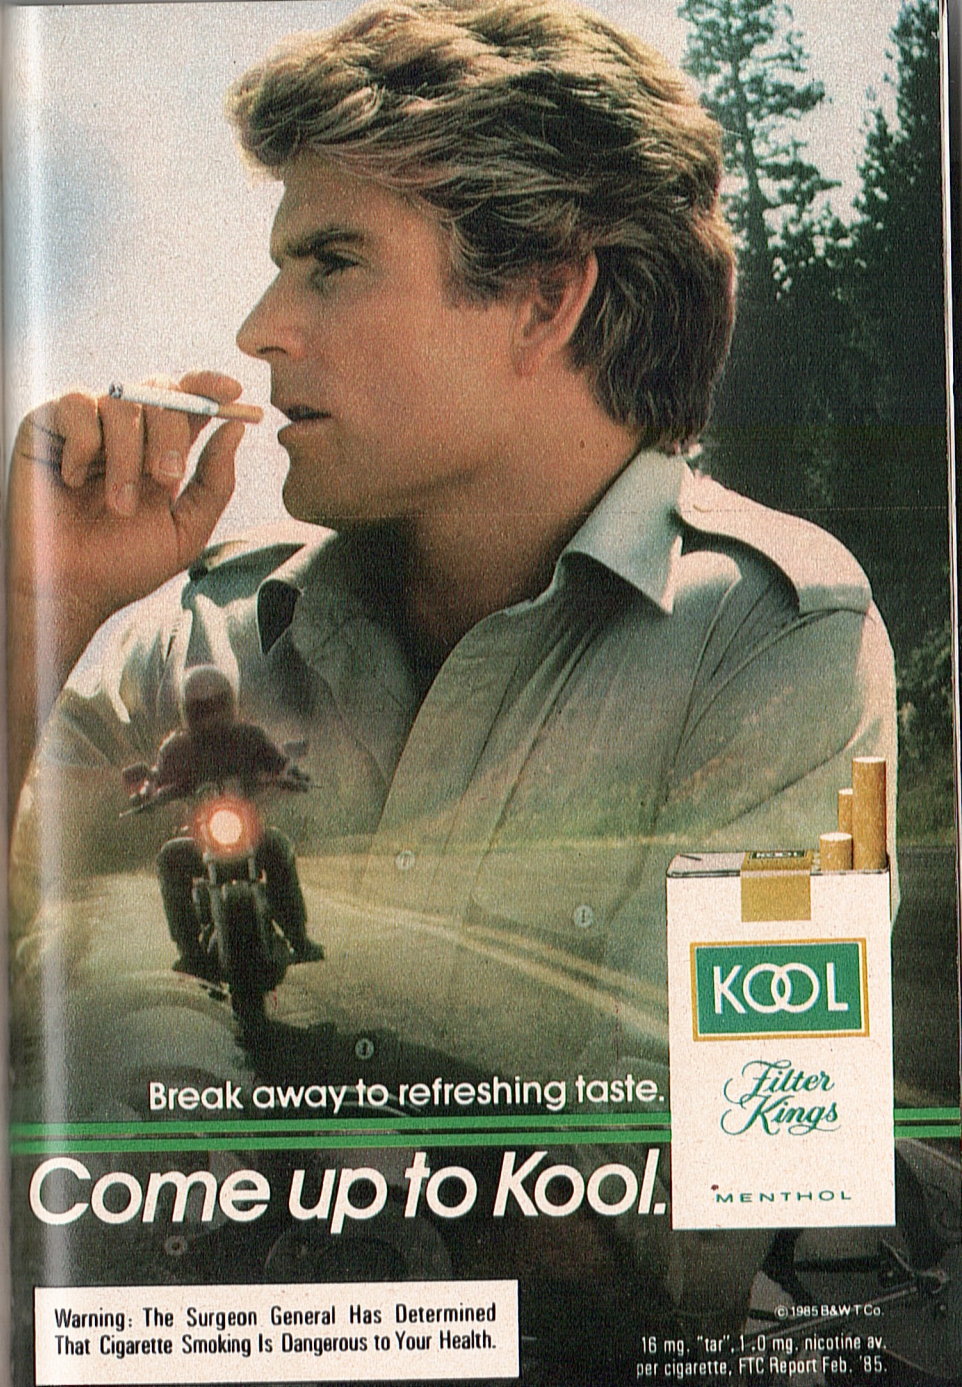
"First I attacked the batting cage. Guys couldn't figure out what was going on, because they could only see Bert just reading this magazine. Besides," continues Frazier, "they were so tight about the season they tried to ignore me. That's not easy, since I was landing direct hits. By now, I've soaked the cage and turn to the mound. Only Blyleven never told me that the Brewers manager, Rene Lachemann [the very same victim of the "Seattle Jell-O Caper"—Ed.], was pitching BP. Poor guy, about to be fired and I'm dropping these shots right on him.

"Unfortunately, Blyleven never told me that, after a while, they stopped batting practice and just watched me bomb the field. I don't know, I think they thought it was funny. They still didn't have a good season." END



URGENT PLEASE CALL

In its struggle to survive, the Lifetime cable service is gambling on phone-in formats featuring such hosts as Dr. Ruth and Regis Philbin

By Herma M. Rosenthal

Comedian Richard Belzer's call-in cable talk show, Hot Properties, had been slowly heating up one night. Mr. T, on to promote an upcoming wrestling match, was fielding questions with the charm of a pit bull. Then, T's tag-team partner, Hulk Hogan, came out agreeing to demonstrate all the right moves on the verbally combative host. Seconds later, Belzer's head was wrapped in the blond behemoth's arms. The comedian blacked out momentarily, hit the deck and came to, bloodied as well as bowed. Belzer went straight from the stage to a hospital emergency room, where it took eight stitches to repair the hole in his head. Hulk Hogan may not have realized it, but he had just struck a blow for Lifetime, the network that produces Hot Properties. For Lifetime, which has been struggling to stay afloat in cable's turbulent waters, the wrestling incident (which Belzer insists was authentic) was a much needed lifeline of publicity. Newspapers picked up on it, other shows excerpted it, and when Belzer returned to Hot Properties to discuss it, the phones rang off the hook.

For the still uninitiated, Lifetime is an advertiser-supported basic-cable system that replaced a health-bent, women-oriented prime-time schedule with year-of-the-yuppie programs. "The information is there," maintains Lifetime programming vice-president Mary Alice Dwyer-Dobbin, "it's just very nicely sugarcoated" with a veneer of entertainment served by hosts encouraged to be frank, flamboyant and slightly flaky. However, the star ingredient—and the one Lifetimers are counting on to boost cellar-dwelling ratings and insuffi- → cient advertising revenues—is the telephone. Relying on the phone-in format that has filled radio stations' coffers, Lifetime believes it can have America tuning in and talking back.

Those who have already discovered Lifetime call in to confide their most intimate sexual problems to Dr. Ruth Westheimer, the diminutive sex therapist with the most imitated German accent this side of Henry Kissinger. Nightly on Good Sex!, Dr. Ruth, as everyone calls her, puts America on the couch, dispensing frank advice without a hint of embarrassment. "Let me tell you something," she reassures her concerned callers, "nothing is weird." Joining her crusade for a "sexually literate society" are celebrity guests (it's become "in" to appear), from rock star Cyndi Lauper (she was asked to write a song on contraception) to sci-fi guru Isaac Asimov (weightlessness, he declared, might improve sexual performance).

If Dr. Ruth's line is busy, you're welcome to try Regis Philbin's Lifestyles or Stanley Siegel's America Talks Back, which, along with Belzer's guide to what's hot and what's not, round out the prime-time schedule. Armed with a mom-do-I-have-to look, Philbin pumps iron with body builders and chops onions with gourmet chefs in the name of "better living, loving, eating and playing." The hyperkinetic Siegel, best remembered by fans of his New York talk show for the on-air therapy sessions he underwent with his real-life shrink, aims his Donahuesque forum at the "we're-mad-as-hell" crowd.

In truth, the phone-in gimmick and the off-center personalities are not reinventing the wheel. They're just the latest experiments out of the Lifetime laboratory, where continual change has become a fact of life. Lifetime was even born of change. It emerged in February 1984, the product of a marriage of convenience between two struggling cable services: the women-targeted Daytime and the Cable Health Network.

True to its roots, Lifetime retained a service-and-information pose under a health-and-women banner. No soaps, no sitcoms, no bleeps and blunders here; Lifetime boldly promised programs that would "enrich our lives." If the formats were tired and the shows as lively as a podiatry convention (and rerun ad nauseam), at least Lifetime hadn't succumbed to scheduling retreads of TV oldies.

Though the idea was noble, it wasn't successful. In May 1984, the network received lower monthly ratings than any other service regularly measured by the Nielsen Home Video Index. A study commissioned by the cable channel itself confirmed fears about viewer response to Lifetime. "What we discovered was that overall awareness for Lifetime was very, very low," says Laurence Rebich, the service's marketing vice-president. "We were not able to establish any kind of franchise at all. We had very loyal followers for some of our shows; our problem was that there wasn't enough of those people to support our network."

Not only didn't people know what Lifetime was—the survey found that nine per cent of the respondents thought it was a religious network—those who did know found it hard to locate particular shows because of Lifetime's erratic pattern of scheduling. The research also indicated that targeting women in the evening hours missed the mark since men were more likely to control the dial then.

Clearly, it was time to go back to the chalkboard. At strategy sessions conducted last summer, Lifetimers tackled the dilemma of how to provide informational television in an arresting enough manner to have mass appeal. They needed to turn away from courting the light TV viewers, who were unlikely to shop around to find their network, and go after the heavy users. Lifetime, the executive think tank decided, would continue to program for women during the daytime, would place its medical programming on Sunday (medical advertising represents some 20 per cent of Lifetime ad revenues), but would revise its evening schedule to incorporate what Lifetime president and CEO Thomas Burchill likes to call "the big idea": interactivity. The nighttime lineup would spotlight live programs sparked by viewer participation via phone links for questions, polls and on-air contests. To lure men, shows would concentrate on trendier topics, such as moneymaking and pop culture.

Burchill's scheme received a $25-million vote of confidence for programming and marketing from the service's parent company, Hearst/ABC Viacom Entertainment Services, and in January 1985 talk-back television was launched. Of course, there were a few hitches. The original hosts of Hot Properties, actress Tovah Feldshuh and cable personality Fred Newman, "were doing nice, adequate jobs," says Mary Alice Dwyer-Dobbin. "But we felt we really needed a strong individual who could bring his own personality to bear on the show." The barb-witted Belzer stepped into the breach. Then, Smart Money, a Baedeker for would-be entrepreneurs quarterbacked by Fran Tarkenton, had to be shifted to a new night after viewers insisted that the network reinstate two exercise shows. Even Tom Burchill's big idea of interactivity wasn't always such a big deal: a typical contest gave a pair of binoculars to the caller who linked designer Rudi Gernreich to the topless bathing suit.

What remains to be seen is if new life can be pumped into Lifetime before the costs make it painful but necessary to pull the plug.

Notwithstanding the setbacks, argues CableVision reviewer Robert DiMatteo, "Lifetime is moving in the right direction. The programs used to be very earnest, well meaning and not very exciting. Now it's a little cranky. It's not for everybody, but as an evening format the call-in concept has a place on cable. It's really the ideal place for people to talk about controversial subjects like sex."

Edward Atorino, a broadcast analyst for Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. Inc., harbors doubts, though, about Lifetime's life expectancy. "There just isn't a large enough audience and not enough advertising dollars. If cable, over the next five years, achieves significantly higher penetration than it now has, and that's being questioned, then the pie may be big enough that the few crumbs that roll off the table will be enough to sustain Lifetime. But it's hard to be optimistic about its future."

The battle will be uphill. Despite a positive trend that has seen the network's availability leap from 16 million cable subscribers to more than 23 million, subscribers don't equal viewers. To reach the industry median and establish credibility with advertisers, Lifetime will have to more than double its ratings on a steady basis. The service must hope that its new marketing strategy, including a $400,000 sweepstakes this past April, will tempt people to sample its wares and that it can produce sufficiently diverting new programs to keep them coming back.

Since Lifetime's metamorphosis, viewership has reportedly climbed from some 67,000 to approximately 142,800 for its prime-time programs, each of which is averaging between 2000 and 3000 calls per live telecast. For the moment, however, Lifetime is still like a patient kept alive by artificial means, unable to survive without infusions of money from its owners. (The service's 1984 losses were put at $10-15 million.) What remains to be seen is if new life can be pumped into Lifetime before the costs make it painful but necessary to pull the plug. In 1986, the network will start charging its cable affiliates a fee. In the meantime, it's resorting to such cost-cutting measures as leaving staff vacancies unfilled. The longer the network does hang on, the better its chances.

"Hello, you're on the air," Stanley Siegel intones. This evening's soapbox focuses on law and order and there's a caller who wants to know what Siegel would do if he found himself in a Bernhard Goetz-type confrontation on a subway. "I like to talk myself out of these jams," Siegel replies. Lifetime hopes to do likewise. END
